SWEDISH SUCCESS FOR DAWSON

Dawson Books is delighted to announce our appointment as main supplier of academic books to Stockholm University, the National Library of Sweden and Orebro University of Sweden. The contract is for 3 years from 1 July 2010 with an option for a further 1 year extension.

Leif Friberg, Department Manager at Stockholm University Library commented, "Stockholm University, the National Library and Orebro University libraries have over many years all greatly benefited from the comprehensive library services of Dawson Books. We have all recognised the very high service standards that Dawson has shown, and I and my library professional colleagues are very happy to continue this relationship. We are also greatly encouraged that Dawson continues to be at the forefront of innovation in our rapidly changing world and develop services that meet the future needs of our libraries."

Kelly Nicholls, Dawson Books Sales Manager for the Nordic nations said, "I am extremely pleased that we can continue to be the main supplier of academic books to Stockholm University and look forward to working with Leif and his team over the coming years as we work together to enhance our partnership."

Dawson has a great deal to offer libraries through enhanced services and the latest collection development tools. This is illustrated by the dawson2Libris service, developed specifically for Stockholm University. The new web resource, dawsonenter, brings revolutionary utility and sophistication to all aspects of book selection and acquisition whilst dawsonera, our ebook platform, continues to flourish with new and relevant content.
