Dawson Books arrives in China

In a unique co-operative programme, Dawson Books has delivered a complete library of books to the University of Nottingham's new campus in the People's Republic of China.

The University commissioned Dawson Books to source, catalogue, service and deliver 7,500 books to its Chinese campus in Ningbo. The team at Dawson rose to the challenge and has delivered all the volumes completely shelf ready in shelf order. What is more, Dawson has populated the library's Aleph Library management system with MARC and item records. Every volume is now ready to be discovered and used by the new campus's students at the start of the 2005-6 session.

Mr. Richard Chamberlain, Collections and Access Management Librarian of The University of Nottingham commented on the project "We have relied heavily on Dawson's flexibility, efficiency and "can-do" service standards, and you've responded brilliantly!"

Diane Kerr, Managing Director of Dawson Books commented, "The team at Dawson has worked so hard on this very special project with the University of Nottingham. We were delighted to add value to the University's project and extend the Dawson quality and expertise to China. The Dawson team has developed an uncommon expertise with shelf ready projects and special assignments such as this are particularly welcome to us."
